From pg. 245 of text:

Alimony is now called “spousal support.” Many people still believe that most women receive spousal support when they divorce. As in the past, however, only about 14 percent are awarded this kind of support in the United States today (Stetson 1997). Black women are even less likely to receive spousal support than are white women (Shelton and Deen 2001).

From chapter references (p. 255):